

hope you know the genetics argument is complete squash. You aren't born with autism you can have a genetic predispositions but it's triggered by environmental causes.

<https://www.autismspeaks.org/expert-opinion/are-children-born-autism-or-does-it-develop-later>

Also, autism would be a normal rate because biology, not every single person who's getting autism as a kid will have a predisposition from their parents so what's causing it? Because the only answer I'm getting is we didn't start tracking it until 2000.

Prevalence of autism in U.S. children increased by 119.4 percent from 2000 (1 in 150) to 2010 (1 in 68). (CDC, 2014) Autism is the fastest-growing developmental disability. (CDC, 2008) Prevalence has increased by 6-15 percent each YEAR from 2002 to 2010. (Based on biennial numbers from the CDC)

One more thing you can say vaccines don't cause autism if you don't have a inert placebo control group. No matter what anyone else says. For example, it's like comparing a group of smokers: person A who smokes 1 pack a day to person B who smokes 2 packs a day and then saying cigarettes don't cause cancer (because they both come up with similar ratings). Question. If not all vaccines are the same why are we injecting all of them into our kids with NONE being testing 1 at a time? Not even with animals.. You cannot prove something that is not tested and then make the assertion that it doesn't cause autism for obvious concerns of our growing autistic population. Obviously it could be a different variable for the autism epidemic but it's a reasonable hypothesis and worth STUDYING BEFORE WE INJECT IT INTO EVERY KID. Why do we have more untested vaccines than before 1960? <https://goo.gl/images/iGrq3z> Why do the pharmaceutical companies have immunity from law? (No economical incentive to keep new or old vaccines safe).
