

"Controversial Vaccine Bill Passes, Drawing Ire From Some Parents" Look at the biased language in this article. I actually watched the legislation session live and the media is full of shit.

Okay for starters, notice they don't show any pictures of the whole room. They zoom way in on the crowd so you won't know there were thousands.

Then they say there were "dozens" of doctors and nurses there in support of the bill. No, there were like 5. And they got all the time to speak they wanted. There actually were dozens of doctors and nurses there, but they were AGAINST the bill.

Bobby Kennedy was even there and they didn't let him speak.

There was not one pro-vax parent there. The entire crowd was against the bill and yet the legislators passed that shit anyway.

The media relies on pharmaceutical advertising so there's no way they're gonna report on this properly.

It is very angering to hear what really happened compared to how it was "reported" to the rest of the nation. The media is our biggest obstacle in this fight to educate people. Anybody still "plugged in" is getting a completely false perspective of the world.

I bet they want to induce autism on as many kids as possible because autistic kids make good victims for them.

You can set up special schools for them and abuse the hell out of them all day and they lack the capacity to articulate their abuse to their parents and then you can just discredit them saying they don't know what they're talking about if they do tell on you.

I wouldn't be in the least bit surprised if the adrenochrome harvested from autistic kids taste especially sweet to them too.

These people are so evil it defies all levels of comprehension and understanding, you can't put nothing past them...

For what other reasons are they trying to induce autism on so many kids, does somebody have a better Theory?

Five people cry and they get national attention. Can the media try any harder to make an issue out of thin air?
