

I feel alone.

I feel like I have no one to share my view of the world with or with anyone that will actually understand. I felt like one of my only hopes was to see this sub reddit grow out of control and to awaken as many people as possible. This group seems just as small as always, I see the same names everywhere. As I read a post about sandy hook today, the amount of people fighting against the narrative of the conspiracy disturbs me and is taking away my hope that any truth of any matter will come to the light. All of our amazing youtube videos and informative documentaries have pretty much been taken off of youtube leaving only propaganda. It seems like we will never win this battle. I still continue to spread my beliefs as far as they will go in real life and on the internet but seem to just receive the same reaction. Denial. As I continue to work and obtain my college degree I just can't help but feel alone with a completely different mindset then 99% of the world around me ( it seems). I apologize for the shit post but just feel down today and needed to express how I felt to the only people/community that seem to understand these issues or even give a fuck about them. Life is tough and I really hope that god can give me some more wisdom on how to change the world because I feel lost and defeated with all of this information and lack of society acceptance when it is just so obvious to me.

Wishing you love and hope <3

Edit: I would like to say thank you again to the people that took time out of there busy lives to help me find a little peace on this shitty day, I love all of you and wish nothing but the best for all of your lives. Thank you again much love <3

You're not alone. It's really hard to talk to "normal" people about it because they don't really care. Even if you have a ton of proof saying that the government is lying, they'll refuse to look into it. Even if the conspiracy becomes main stream, most people are too lazy to even bother doing their own research. This sub-reddit taught me a lot and I'm relatively new. Thanks for opening my eyes and I hope you continue doing so!

Loneliness is a blessing. Spending time with yourself, closing your eyes and looking within, really figuring out who you are and why you are here is the only thing that matters in life, other than loving your family and friends and acting with integrity and rejecting greed. If you take the time to look within enough you'll realize that we are all connected in spirit and that no one is ever alone.

I feel the same way. I know I seem totally crazy to friends in real life. Some people avoid me or shut me down completely. It's important not to take it to heart. They are not ready to hear the message. All we can do is try to be there for others and spread positivity and love as much as possible. I believe that's the only real thing we can do to change the current situation.

Ten years for me. People dont want to know, but deep down they do know. Try not to get too depressed. Just enjoy your life and treat it like a game, slip in bits of wisdom here and there. Thinking that you will be the one to change things is a trap. If you wake up one person that could be enough.

I actually did a real lengthy post on tinder without my picture on it. I stated that I don't need you and I'm not in competition with a million guys to "try and get you," am a red pill'd conspiracy theorist, idgaf what anyone thinks, I do my own thing, go my own way, read a ton, and am non-traditional, anti-social, almost anti-everything arm-chakr revolutionary in the alleys of life.

Then I made rules that pissed off a shit ton of SJW's: don't have any kids, no abortion history, if you've had more partners than fingers on your hand or are older than me, then fuck off as fast as you can, also only those who come from 2 parent homes w no daddy issues.

It filtered out a shit ton of psychos and basically attracted to me someone that is like one of us from this sub, cool AF, super smart, schooled me on a few topics on diet and glyphosate, books on Illuminati families, sitchen, Zagami, engines that run on water who's inventor was poisoned, and all sorts of awesome stuff. yes, agree on Watts - he relayed this tale about Bodhidharma which is a good one to come off a funk

<https://m.youtube.com/watch?v=y2Zai98o81E>

Basically a better version of this:

he seeker Huike (Chinese WadeGiles: Hui-k'o) patiently stood deep in the nocturnal snow outside the old master's cave, yearning for instruction. He finally hacked off his own left forearm and presented it as a demonstration of his sincere aspiration for complete enlightenment. (In Daoxuan's earlier and likely more accurate account, wandering bandits had cut off his arm.) Bodhidharma told Huike: "This enlightenment is not to be sought through another." Huike begged to have his agitated self or mind pacified. The sage retorted, "Show me your self and I will pacify it." Huike said "I've sought it many years but can't get hold of it." Bodhidharma then declared: "There! It is pacified once and for all!" Upon hearing this, suddenly Huike completely awakened to his transcendent True Nature before/beyond the ego-self. He was free in/as his Ever-Free Nature.

don't worry OP, I was having this same conversation with somebody yesterday.

With everything you've found in life, the truth, it begs the question in the back of your mind 'what else don't I know?', which kind of fuels this never ending tussle towards uncovering seemingly endless truths.

The hard truth of the matter, however, is that there is little you can do to stop Big Oil, or corrupt governments, or shadowy craftsmen. But! You can look after you.

There's things you can do, skills you can learn, that make you impervious to the coming apocalypse or collapse or control. You don't need to hide yourself away or prep with guns and stock up on tin food, but you can learn skills and master techniques that will help you. Small-crop farming, a martial art that fixes your body, self-reliance and independence, learning to live beneath your means, these are all things which give you control over something you feel powerless towards.

And if they still come for you, then there's not much you can do, but you can do as much as you can to step away from society and control.

I hope the responses you're getting in this thread are giving you new perspective! MolassesFlowz probably hit the nail on the head, but I'd like to put in my two satoshis having started my path down the rabbit hole at least 13 years ago. I think the percentage of "woke" people today versus then is the same if not greater, as the only reason the censorship and social stigmas are increasing is because there is greater need for them in a world of open user-generated information.

This like-minded community of ours doesn't just exist on this website - give yourself the opportunity to find the other like-minded individuals that you pass in your day-to-day life. Each one of us still has a different piece to the puzzle. Like the book The Giver, those with the knowledge are carrying it for a portion of the population that don't have it. They are like the sleeping people in The Matrix. Understand how to confront and defeat the Agent that appears when they are presented with this information; the only way to be able to do that is to be comfortable enough with the information yourself; don't worry about educating others, if you have wisdom then people will seek it from you, and even if they don't, that's not why you have it. Everyone is individually responsible for themselves. The best you can do is set a proper example.

If you are still discouraged as to our position in this information war, simply find solace in others that are joining you in this quest. People have mentioned Alan Watts; let me add to that David Icke, Michael Tsarion, even Russell Brand - we're not alone in this endeavor. Every social media celebrity, and every legacy media celebrity that escapes corruption is another ally, and as soon as you join this resistance, you're not giving up without a fight. If you could take the blue pill and go back in, would you?

You must be patient and continue learning. It may be you are missing some pieces to the puzzle. There are 2 types of people we come across, people who are a part of the game, and people who are totally in the dark about the game / matrix. The first type will of course distance themselves from you, since you are not one of them and therefore make them uncomfortable and fearful of your intentions. The other type is so blind and in the dark, they may also fear you, because they just aren't meant to see it. They would lack the ability to make a stand, so God Himself blinds them. Finally, there is one more type. Gatekeepers. They act like they are truthers, but in reality they are in on the game and just controlling the narrative and purposely deceiving (while mixing enough truth in to keep you in the dark about their intentions). Beware. Many deceivers are out in the world. In the end you must just stand up for what you believe in, and set a good example for those who cross your path while protecting your credibility.

I have been in a similar place. To change the world, we have to start with ourselves. To truly change ourselves, we have to begin a new reconciled relationship with God through Jesus Christ. I can ramble on with my story, but Jesus is the final answer and truth. When I became a born again Christian, I soon after had to basically cut off my old friends. I remember sitting there, reading my Bible, technically more lonely than ever, and yet I felt less lonely than ever before. Jesus is a friend like no other, his spirit lives within you when you become a child of God by faith in him. There's a peace and joy in him that I can't express in words.

Read these seven claims that Jesus made about himself; as you do, may God speak to you and draw you by his Spirit:

John 6:35 - Jesus said to them, “I am the bread of life; whoever comes to me shall not hunger, and whoever believes in me shall never thirst.

John 8:12 - Again Jesus spoke to them, saying, “I am the light of the world. Whoever follows me will not walk in darkness, but will have the light of life.”

John 10:9-10 - “I am the door. If anyone enters by me, he will be saved and will go in and out and find pasture. The thief comes only to steal and kill and destroy. I came that they may have life and have it more abundantly.”

John 10:11 - “I am the good shepherd. The good shepherd lays down his life for the sheep.”

John 11:25-26 - Jesus said to her, “I am the resurrection and the life. Whoever believes in me, though he die, yet shall he live, and everyone who lives and believes in me shall never die. Do you believe this?”

John 14:6 - Jesus said to him, “I am the way, and the truth, and the life. No one comes to the Father except through me.”

John 15:5 - “I am the vine; you are the branches. Whoever abides in me and I in him, he it is that bears much fruit, for apart from me you can do nothing.”
